"Nothing is now needed but the extension of this grand improvement to the three forks of the Kentucky River to make it the best, cheapest, and one of the most profitable public works in the United States. By this extension the mineral wealth of our mountains will be made tributary to our rich valleys; and by a natural reaction, the capital and agricultural products of the valleys will cause the wild and sterile mountains to resound with the cheerful and happy music of the loom and the anvil." - Owen G. Gates, businessman from the 1850s.
